

WEST SIDE

DISCOURSE ON MILTON.

Large Number Attended the First Lecture of University Course.

The first of a series of university extension lectures given under the auspices of the Hyde Park Literary and Debating society was held last evening in the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist church. The lecturer was Colonel Homer B. Sprague, Ph. D., formerly professor in Cornell university and president of the State University of North Dakota. Last evening's discourse was on "John Milton."

The speaker was introduced by John R. Edwards. After a few explanatory remarks Dr. Sprague said:

Milton was charming and was one of the greatest men of the age, although we cannot all agree with his views. Two centuries have passed since he was laid to rest, but his name is still a household word. He was a poet, a scholar and an statesman. He had many contemporaries, such as Shakespeare and Johnson. At that time religious views were a matter of life and death. He was one of the most ardent scholars of the age. In his poems we get a glimpse of almost every passion. There is no evidence that he feared anything under God. He was passionately fond of music, a good singer and a skillful organist. He was once accused of being a devotee of the path of honor and virtue, but it was his passion for the observation of man, it could not miss the eye of God. He came down from the sublime heights to which he soared and wielded the sword in defense of his country. After Milton had served the cause of liberty, he returned and began to write. He opened a private school as a teacher. He was a disgrace to such a man. But Michael Angelo and Raphael could carve the images of man, and why is it disgraceful for even Milton to carve in the young minds the image of God? Roger Williams at that time advocated free religious views, and suffered for it. He was the first man to incorporate that principle. The name of Roger Williams will shine as a beacon, and let no laurel be plucked from his immortal name. Some say, "Tolerance is the grand will of the deity, and if every religious sect is allowed to preach his follies, there can be no religion. No man has a right to interfere between man and his maker, and this was the very thought which entered young Milton's heart."

IT IS BRIMFUL OF FUN.

"Our Regiment" Presented in a Splendid Manner at Davis' Theater.

"Our Regiment" at Davis' theater will be very popular, as the piece is brimful of fun. The loveliness and the cantankerous opposition of the irritable "papas" must be seen to be enjoyed. Miss Lisle Leigh is excellent as a maiden deep in love, and her frantic endeavors to secure the object of her affections are the cause of continual merriment.

"Our Regiment" will be continued today and tomorrow and will be succeeded by the Irish comedy, "Irish Loyalty," for the latter half of the week.

Minooka.

Andrew Diskin, son of Thomas Diskin of Main street, died yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, after about a month's illness. The deceased was 17 years and 9 months of age. The funeral will occur Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock. Interment in St. Joseph's cemetery.
